Good afternoon

Everyone at Wawel Villa and Turtle Creek Manor are getting outside as much as possible enjoying the beautiful summer weather. We hope this lasts well into September.

However, the recent resurgence in COVID cases has seen new infections more than double in the past few weeks. This virus is continuously mutating trying to evade vaccines and our immunity. Emergency rooms are once again dangerously overcrowded. We pray that this is not a dress-rehearsal of what's coming this fall and winter when temperatures drop and people move indoors.

A reminder that all visitors are required to pass a rapid test for indoor as well as outdoor visits. For absences we will be happy to provide test kits to anyone who will be in contact with a resident while away. Absences create opportunities for close contact, and this is not a good time to take unnecessary risks.

A special request from our nursing department. When leaving phone messages at our nursing station, please leave them in English if possible. Sometimes we have staff on duty who do not understand Polish, and this may lead to miscommunication or worse.

Many long-term care homes still do not have air-conditioning in resident rooms. You will be happy to know that all our resident suites and common areas have their own individual air-conditioners with thermostats that are continuously monitored through our building's wi-fi system. Appreciated by residents and employees alike, especially during the recent heatwave.

Until next time.
